Official Dispatch to That Effect.

Belief, However, That It is Misleading.

U. S. Minister Thompson's Recent Cablegram

Conceded in London to Be Probably Correct.

Revolutionists Victorious in an Engagement Bismarck Seriously III-The Vatican to Investigate Opposition to Satolli.

LONDON, Sept. 10 .- (By Cable and Associated Press.) An official dispatch nas been received at the Brazilian Legation here which seems to throw light upon the situation of affairs in that disturbed republic. The message says that Rio de Janeiro was in a state of perfect tranquility, all alarmng reports to the contrary. The official message adds that the Brazilian government is strong, has the confiience of a majority of the people, and that it is able to repress and will repress all revolts. Congress, continues the official communication, has just declared a state of siege, but the government prefers not to be obliged to carry out the workings of martial law.

There is a significant ending to this message, however, and that is that it is admitted that the insurgents have attempted to make several landings at various points, but they were repulsed and, it is said, appear to be thoroughly disheartened, and likely to surrender at any moment. The insurgent squad-ron, it appears, is now held in check by the forts at the entrance of the bay, where the officers in command have orders to fire upon the revolutionary vessels the moment they are sighted Gunners are kept at their posts night and day, and sub-marine torpedoes are reported to have been placed in the channels likely to be followed by the insurgents if ah attempt is made to put to sea and steam for Santos with the intention of capturing that port and joining issues with the insurgent forces in the revolted districts.

This official message is regarded here is being somewhat reassuring, though the fact is not lost sight of that it is an "official" communication from the Brazilian government, and therefore likely to depict the situation in most favorable colors. On the other hand, the message sent by the United States Minister to Brazil, Thomas Thompson, stating that there was danger of the bombardment of Rio de Janeiro, is looked upon as being the most trustworthy statement of the state of affairs existing there.

In view of the statements made by the Brazilian delegate in Europe to the effect that the naval revolt was not inspired by patriotic motives, the opin-ion expressed by naval officer here is that the insurgents' ships should be treated as pirates, and if the government of Brazil is not able to bring then to terms, the foreign warships should be called upon to restore order, though this will be done in any case if the combardment of Rio de Janeiro is at-

The Insurgents Apparently Between the "Devil and the Deep Sea."

BUENOS AYRES, Sept. 10.—(By Cable and Associated Press.) Brazil's naval insurgents are hemmed in within the confinest of the heav fines of the bay, surrounded on all sides by land forces loyal to Peixoto, and, for lack of reinforcements or supplies, the revolt is soon expected to end in a flasco, like Rear-Admiral Wanderkolk's recent attempt.

The latest advices received here say that the insurgents have attempted to land at various points in the bay, but have everywhere been repulsed, and appear to be disheartened. Admiral Mellos invited the garrison in Santa Cruz to join the revolt, but met with a firm

Marshal Gard to Guard His Charge Until the Steamer Leaves-An Attack Made at Tulare-Strike at San

By Telegraph to The Times

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10 .- (By the Associated Press.) The first Chinamen to have their sentences of deportation, under the Geary Registration Act, executed, arrived in San Fransisco from Los Angeles yesterday, and are con-fined in the County Jail, where they will be detained until Tuesday, when they will be sent back to the Celestial Kingdom on the steamer China. There re five Chinese in the batch, and they came here in charge of United States Marshal Gard, who will see them on board the steamer, and will not leave them until he has the captain's receipt for them.

The Chinese are all laborers, and were arrested on warrants issued from the United States Court in Los Angeles They were taken before Judge Ross, and by him sentenced to be deported as they had not complied with the law requiring Chinese in the United States to be registered. Collector Wise was notified by telegram that the Chinese were on their way to San Francisco, and was requested by Marshal Gard to have a properly authorized officer ready to receive the prisoners. The Collector telegraphed to Washington Collector telegraphed to was came for instructions, and the answer came for instructions, and the answer came last evening directing him to notify the marshal in charge of the prisoners that he would have to look out for them until they were on board the steamer, as the entire matter rested with the courts, and the marshal was the man properly suthorized to carry out its order.

The news that these Chinese had arrived in the city and would be placed the steamer leaving on Tuesday created a sensation. All through China town here the matter was the only subject of conversation among the Chinese of all classes last night. The presidents of the Six Companies held a conference yesterday afternoon at the Consul-General's office, and not a few dispatches passed between them and the Chinese Legation at Washington. Those who profess to know what the local Chinese are about to do declare that the Consul-General and the Six Companies are preparing a petition to send to President Cleveland. The docu-ment will place the blame for the Chinese not registering heretofore upon the faith that they gave to their American legal advisors, who assured them that the Geary law could not stand. It will promise allegiance in the future and pray for an extension of time in which to allow them to register. In view of recent developments the Chinese question is creating much pub-lic interest here, though there seems no probability of any violence among the classes who are most hostile to the Chinese. United States Judges Kenna and Morrow are expected to decide an important case tomorrow, involving the deportation or an unregistered Chinaman, and if they decide in favor of deportation it is probably that an effort will be made to have a number of Chinese in this city arrested. ber of Chinese in this city arrested.

An organization known as the Anti-Chinese Law and Order League, which is led by several local and anti-Chi-nese agitators, has arranged for a large mass-meeting on Thursday, at which efforts will be made to secur the rigid 'nforcement of the Geary act, and, among other things, a memorial will be addressed to Congress, calling for an appropriation of funds neces sary to enforce the law. The situation in the interior of the State does not seem to indicate the probability of any very serious acts of violence agains

Chinese laborers. The attack upon the Chinese grape-pickers near Fresno on Friday seems to have been made by a party of tough characters, more for the purpose of rob-bing than anything else. One of the Chinamen attacked there is in a dan-gerous condition and may not recover. A dispatch from Tulare announces that an attack has been made upon Chinese vegetable peddlers there. A party of, an attack has been made upon Chinese vegetable peddlers there. A party of, four men on horseback rode to a house at night, produced pistols, and demanded money from the Chinese, who said they had none. The robbers announced that they would kill them, so the Chinese brought out a money bag with $175. After that the robbers is a sid, guarantee the safe delivery of every Chinese here for from $100 to $250. At present the rate is at the highest figure, for investigation is very money bag with $175. After that the robbers went through the pockets of the Chinese and extracted $15 more. One Chinaman tried to get away, but money bag with $175. was knocked down with a club. A man named Clark has been arrested for this offense, and warrants have been issued for the arrest of the others. A dispatch from San Bernardino states that three hundred Chinese cooks waiters and other laborers quit work this morning by order of the Six Com-panies. The Southern Hotel is closed for lack of help. The Chinese say they will return to China

Whether true or not, the story is circulated among the Chinamen here, and those who have money are leaving. All Chinese washhouses are closing, or are badly crippled for want of help. The Chinese talk about a possible massacre of Americans in a possible massacre of Americans in China, and a like retaliation here later on, and say that the only safe place for them is in their own country.

Hotels and restaurants have found it difficult to get cooks and dish-washers on so short a notice, and some of them failed to open their doors today. Deputy United States Marshal Farls passed through the city today in charge of four Chinamen arrested at Redlands, which added to the excite ment of the Celestials here, as are informed that a number of rants of arrest have been made out

HOW THEY DO IT.

Chinese Brought into This Country by an Organized Band. NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(By the Associated Press.) The provisions of the Chinese Exclusion Act are practically nullified at this port, for, in nine cases out of ten, those seeking admittance are able to pass the ordeal of the rigid examinations and investigations. Col-lector Kilbreth, in looking over a lot of alleged merchants, students and actors the other day, said: "There is certainly fraud here," and yet, after a most rigid examination, he was unable to shake the testimony of a single individual. Their credentials being seem ingly correct, they were admitted.

According to the suspicions of men mest intimately associated with the Chinese cases, there is an organization of smugglers, having headquarters and agents in Hong Kong, Vancouver, B. C., San Francisco, New Orleans, Ha-vana and New York. The principal ports are Havana and New York, the other cities being merely forwarding stations. Other features which make this scheme possible are the Free Masonry of the Chinese, their kinship, money and desire to circumvent the exclusion law. The cases of the students and actors who enter the country for the first time are most interesting. These all come across the continent from the Pacific Coast to New Orleans in bond, and go thence to Havana. They doubtedly receive instructions on way, but the finishing touches to their education are put on at Havana, where they remain sometimes months, some-times longer. In Havana they are almost invariably domiciled with Yung Sing, and when they reach New York they are met by Yung Luck, his cousin, or Lee Foy, the latter's part-ner. These three have been openly denounced by the Chinese inspector at this port as smugglers. Examinations of applicants for ad-mission take place in the main cabins of the Ward line steamers. The Chinese, to prove that they are not la-borers, have permitted their finger nails to grow from the day on which they left their own country. They are generally asked to describe the route by which they came from China. This is now readily answered, but a few weeks ago it was a difficult question. They have evidently been enlightened in the meantime. When asked why they have taken such a circuitous route to reach New York, they claim either to have had business in Havana or to have stopped to see a brother, cousin or friend. Nothing can tran-scend their calmness when answering questions, and no amount of cross-examining can shake their testimony.

Within six weeks upward of thirty students have arrived here, and twen-ty-five have disappeared or been found working in Chinese restaurants or laundries. In the same time over twenty actors have reached New York, and, since the first of the year, seventy-five. There is but one Chinese theater in the city. Some actors ap-pear on the stage for a day or two in the capacity of "the populace," or "soldiers" or among the "retinue of rigid.

The system of communication kept up between New York and Havana is per-fect, and if an unusual question is put to the applicants of today which they cannot answer, in two weeks' time every incoming Chinese can meet it clearly and calmly, smiling. After reaching this country the celestials work out the amount of money ad-vanced in certain instances by the smugglers here, and it is presumed that the latter add a good-sized sum to

Other Measures Stand No Show Whatever-A Cessation of Compromise Talk-The House Dependent Upon Committe Work.

By Telegraph to The Times. WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 .- (By the Associated Press.) The Senate, during the coming week, will devote itself almost entirely to the discussion of the repeal bill. Possibly there may be an occasional break during the morning hour, but the calendar affords very little scope for diversion in this respect. The calendar is, indeed, one of the briefest of publications, these days, owing to the fact that general committee action has been encouraged in the interest of legislation on the Sherman

The calendar contains two or three bills providing for the settlement of government claims; three resolutions for the payment of expenses of recent claimants to seats in the Senate; Senator Morgan's resolution; half a dozen measures of minor importance reported from the Committee on Public Lands; Senator Hill's bill for the repeal of the federal election law, and Senator Voorhee's repeal bill and his bill for the removal of the tax on State banks. Senator Voorhees decided more than a week ago that it would be inexpedi-ent to push his bill in the interest of the national banks until the more important repeal bill should be disposed of, and his repeal bill has been laid aside to allow the House measure to be discussed until the Senate is ready for action, when, if conditional repeal is reached, the Voorhees bill will proba bly be substituted for the bill which comes from the other end of the Capi-

Senator Hill will not attempt to secure consideration for his anti-federal election law bill until, the question of repeal is concluded. They are the only subjects of national importance before the Senate, except Senator Pef-fer's resolution concerning the reserves of New York, Philade phia and Boston banks. Other measures on the calendar stand no show, according to the present aspect of affairs, of receiving the slightest attention. It is quite evident that it is the purpose of the repeal advocates to hold the measure be-fore the Senate for the present as the one object of the session, to the exclusion of every other subject, as far as that can be done. The bill has the right-of-way after 2 o'clock. It is even possible that the bill will be pressed more persistently during the

there is a cessation of compromise talk. The outlook for the week, therefore, is one of solid talk on the financial sit-uation, with the bill repealing the purchasing clause of the Sherman law as a basis. Senator Teller's speech, which was begun yesterday, will be continued tomorrow. Senator Mitchell of Oregon has given notice of a speech on Tuesday, and Senator Daniel for a speech on Thursday. Other speeches sufficient to occupy the time of the Senate for a week are known to be in preparation. Part of the day on Wednesday will be devoted to eulogies of the late Senator Stanford of California. In the House there is nothing of importance on the horizon for the com-ing week, except the work of the Ways and Means, Banking and Currency, and Appropriation committees, which is proceeding under resolutions passed when the committees were announced. None of the other House committees have had a meeting. Not a bill has been reported. This leaves the House without a calendar, and therefore unable to go ahead with the consideration of legislative matters except by Disclosure at a Late Day of an Interesting ode-Deputy Warden Russ Gives Some Hitherto Unpublished History.

By Telegraph to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(By the Associated Press.) Deputy Warden Russ of the District Jail made a statement today that the skeleton of Guiteau, the assassin of President Gar-field, is not on exhibition at the medi-cal museum, as has been generally

It will be remembered that for a long time prior to the execution, strenuous efforts were made to ascertain where Gulteau was to be buried. Persons acting in the interest of resurrectionists, both those who wantod the body for dissection as well as set the body for dissection as well as several enterprising museum proprie-tors who much desired to secure it for exhibition purposes, industriously questioned every one who it was thought possessed the slightest knowl-

Great precautions are taken to prevent the grave from being robbed, and the following mode of procedure was greed upon to prevent the body from being stolen. In order to obviate what-ever legal difficulties might arise, and to forestall any claim a sister or brother of the murderer might make, it was decided he should make a will bequeathing his body to Dr. Hicks, and it will be remembered that this will, when published created some curiosity wording of it, giving, as it did, his body to be disposed of as the bene-ficiary, saw fit. After going over the whole matter, and realizing that it would be impossible to properly pro-tect the corpse, it was decided to bury it in the fall. On the night of the hang-ing, after the autopsy, the body re-mained in a cheap coffin in the chapel of the jail.

Upon my arrival at the jail," said Deputy Russ, "early on the Saturday morning following the execution, I secured a couple of trusties, and, taking them with me, proceeded to the laundry-room. It was a little room just to the east of the engine-room, dimly lighted by a small barred grating, and made an ideal tomb. The amateur grave-diggers went to work, and, quickly removing the flooring, dug a grave sufficiently deep.

"By this time the body had been brought down from the chapel and the grave finished. There was only a mall party that stood about that open grave and listened to the solemn reading of the burial service. Gen. Crocker who was warden, was present, and, believe, Charlie Reed, the lawyer who assisted in Guiteau's defense, beside several guards and two prisoners wh dug the grave. It was a weird scene and one I shall never forget. The burial in such a somber place was par-ticularly nerve-trying, and I think we all felt relieved when Dr. Hicks concluded and the darkeys began to cover up the coffin.

"This did not consume much time and it was not long before the grave was filled up and the flooring restored to its normal position. There was no particular compact made as to secrecy among us, but it seemed to be gener-ally understood that we would maintain silence, especially as there was considerable excitement at the time. The story that the body had been seretly removed to the medical museum was permitted to go uncontradicted, just as I state, because we did not beappropos of his advocacy of the Sherman law.

A lawyer down in Florida had been retained to protect a local railroad against farmers, whose animals were desiccated by the train. For three years he appeared before the county and district courts in advocacy of the wrongs of his clients. Finally he was discharged by the railway company, and at once became a Populist. Hired one day to represent a man, whose long-horned cow had become a thoroughbred Jersey by cross with a locomotive, he faced a lawyer who was his successor in the affections of the local Jay Gould. "I want to declare now," he said in concluding his diatribe against the grasping and soulless monoply that, vampire-like, sucked the lifeblood of the people, "that for three years I held my conscience in abeyance, but now it has broke loose."

THE TAX LEVY.

Providing for the Depleted Bond Fund.

The Matter to Be Decided by the Supervisors.

A Complex Situation That Must Be Met and Overcome.

Proposition That 25 Per Cent. of Total Amount Heretofore Unpro-vided for Be Levied This Year.

In all probability the Board of Supervisors at their meeting today will fix the rate of taxation for the present year. In addition to the increased State rate the subject has recently been made more complex by the discovery of Dist.-Atty. Dillon that for several years past the law relating to several years past the law relating to a special levy to meet outstanding bonds and interest proportionately, has been disregarded in part. At the meeting of the board last Friday the matter was broached by the District Attorney and considered by the supervisors in executive session. The section of the County Government Act having reference to this subject reads as follows:

"The board of supervisors shall cause to be assessed and levied each year, upon the taxable property of the county, in addition to the levy author-ized for other purposes, a sufficient sum to pay the interest on outstanding bonds, issued in conformity with the provisions of this act, accruing before the next annual tax levy, and such proportion of the principal that at the end of five years the sum raised shall equal, at 20 per cent. of the amount of bonds issued; at the end of nine years at least 40 per cent. of the amount, and at and before the date of maturity of the least 40 per cent. of the amount, and at and before the date of maturity of the bonds, shall be equal to the whole amount of the principal and interest; and the money arising from such levies shall be used for the payment of bonds shall be used for the payment of bonds shall be used for the payment of bonds and interest coupons, and for no other purpose whatever; and the treasurer shall open and keep in his books a separate and special account thereof, which shall at all times show the exact condition of said bond fund."

This was carefully gone over by the supervisors and the county's legal adviser, but at that time no definite conclusion as to the course to be pursued was arrived at. The matter thus remains in abeyance, and will, no doubt, come up today for action.

It seems that, while former boards of supervisors have each year provided for the payment of interest on the bonds, thus complying with the more important part of the law in question, and thus proving, prima facie, that the intent to evade a mandatory provision was absent, yet the fact remains that, by a singular lack of foresight, the laying away of certain sums to meet the principal of the bonds has been neglected. Whether there lurks behind this apparent lapse of public duty an intention on the part of the county's former guardians to thus proportionately decrease the tax rate in order to ingratiate themselves with their constituents is not at present the real point at issue. It is sufficient to say, point at issue. It is sufficient to say without any desire of condoning such offense, if intentionally committed, that whatever benefits have accrued the from have been enjoyed by the t whatever benefits have accrued therefrom have been enjoyed by the tax-payers at large.

It seems that, from 1881 to 1891, no attention whatever was paid to that part of the law relating to the special levy to meet the principal of the bonds outstanding, although, as before stated, there has never been a large regarding the payment of interest. Since 1891, on the authority of Supervisor Forrester, it can be stated that the law has been compiled with to the letter.

According to the figures furnished by Dist.-Atty. Dillon, and which were published in last Friday's Times, it seems that the amount needed to supply the derelictions of former boards of supervisors is $197,500. This sum, added to the amount required for county and State purposes, will increase the rate to an alarming extent, considering the present financial condition of the country. In addition to this, also, the increased rate of city and State taxation should not be forgotten.

Another point in this matter which has not had the proper consideration is the exact use, or rather disage.

not had the proper consideration

Another point in this matter which has not had the proper consideration is the exact use, or, rather, disuse, to which the funds accumulated by this special levy are put. It simply means the taking out of circulation each year of a vast sum of money, and locking it up in the treasury vaults, or as special deposits in the banks.

It has also been said that the statute requiring this annual withdrawal from circulation is mandatory, inasmuch as the Legislature has inserted the word "shall" when defining the powers of the supervisors. The courts have often held that the word "shall" can be considered as "may," when applied to public bodies possessing discretionary powers, whenever in times of crises the public weal demands it. Certainly the present is a time demanding the utmost consideration for the welfare of the taxpayer, and, should the present Board of Supervisors view the matter as the equity of the situation suggests, it is hardly probable that anyone—would be foolish enough to bring contrary mandamus proceedings.

Surely no taxpayer would want to "cut off his nose to spite his face," gests, it is hardly probable that anyone would be foolish enough to bring contrary mandamus proceedings.

Surely no taxpayer would want to "cut off his nose to spite his face," and the bondholder has not been born yet who would not prefer to continue in unmolested receipt of his interest on gilt-edged public securities rather than cloud his own title to "the goose that lays the golden egg" by pushing a growing and prosperous community to the wall in time of temporary financial stringency.

However, great as the need of the hour may be, there seems no disposition, as far as can be learned, on the part of the supervisors to follow in the lagging footsteps of their predecessors. It is a fact that the loophole afforded by an acceptable definition of the word "shall" has not even been considered by the board in their discussions. A proposition has been advanced, and seems to have an element of "good, sound horse-sense" in it, that the board recognize the $197.500 mentioned in the District Attorney's statement, and levy an additional tax to the amount of 25 per cent, or about $50,000 for this year. This will certainly meet all the requirements of the case and will set a valuable precedent to future boards. It will show them that by making the levy, each year, as long as the law so states, will only be increasing the annual tax rate by a minimum per cent., while by procrastinating year by year they are just "hatching chickens that will come home to roost" upon their successors. The lesson will have been an expensive one but it will possess the virtue of having been well learned.

As an instance of Mr. Lopez's efforts in the direction of economy, he has already cut the expenses of footing up the assessment rolls and segregating the school districts $133, as compared with the cost of the work last year, and the taxpayers, Mr. Lopez stated, could rest assured that he would cut the expenses of his office to the lowest possible figure without interfering with the accurate performance of the work. COINING THE SEIGNIORAGE. The Opinions of Leading San Francis

The San Francisco Call of Saturday contains interviews with leading bank

The San Francisco Call of Saturday contains interviews with leading bankers of that city, giving their opinions in regard to the effect upon the financial situation should the rumor that Secretary Carlisle intends coining the seignlorage prove to be true.

Mr. Hellman of the Nevada Bank takes a cheerful view of the matter. Since the coinage of the builion now lying idle and useless in the treasury vaults will be of benefit to the government, it must needs be to the people, and he would heartily indorse such action. In regard to the Secretary's taking such a step without waiting for authority from Congress, Mr. Hellman says that he will do nothing that he has not a perfect legal right to do. If he decides to take this step it will not be until he is perfectly sure of his position and power. Mr. Hellman predicts much better times in the near future, feeling sure that the repeal of the Sherman act will give to the people what they most need—confidence.

Mr. Lillenthal of the Anglo-Californian Bank thought it would be an excellent thing, and that Carlisle could not do a better thing than to put the $5i,000,000 now in the treasury into active circulation. "The country will be just $5i,000,000 better off," he said, "and as far as its being an extraordirary step on the part of the Secretary, in times like these, drastic and heroic measures should be taken without hesitation when they promise to be of advantage to the country."

Mr. Brown of the Bank of California considered it a good idea to use the seigniorage, as lying in the treasury it is of no use to any one, but he declined to criticise Secretary Carlisle's action should he take the responsibility of coining it.

Mr. Scott of the Crocker-Sissons Bank could not see any advantage to be derived by the sevent free proposed to the second of the se Some days ago George A. Blanks, an Alameda confectioner, was the victim of a practical joke. Although a married man, some one inserted an advertisement in a San Francisco paper, in Mr. Blank's name, for correspondence with a view to matrimony. The gentleman laid the matter before Chief Crowley of San Francisco, and while the perpetrator of the joke was not discovered, Mr. Blank satisfactorily proved that he had no hand in the affair.

The advertisement brought big returns, and for a long while Mr. Blank's mall was the largest that was delivered to any one person in the enclual city. The receiver of these letters did the best he could. To each of the correspondents who seemed earnest in the matter he wrote a little note, giving a bit of fatherly advice.

Some of these letters were published, and among them was the following from Arizona. With it was a picture, and it is on this that new developments in the story hang:

should he take the responsibility of colning it.

Mr. Scott of the Crocker-Sissons Bank could not see any advantage to be derived by the people from such coinage. "There is silver enough coined now," he said; "there is $11,000,000 in silver lying right here in our mint; the difficulty is to get it into circulation. Silver is hard to handle and banks do not care to keep much of it on hand; when we need it we have to send a dray after it, and it has all to be counted over and recounted and bothered with generally. It is inconvenient and bulky, and I cannot see how coining $50,000,000 more will do any good."

and it is on this that new developments in the story hang:

WILLIAMS, Ariz., Aug. 14.

G. A. Blank—Dear Sir: Having read your add in the Examiner of August 11, I take the liberty to write you. I have no children or relations and could I meet or make the acquaintance of some honorable gentleman, and we were pleased with each other it might result happily for both.

I am of Brunett type 5 feet 2, in hight not thin nor stout. Enclosed I send Photo. Should you feel incheed to cultivate an acquaintance please ans. at once all do not intend to remain here how coining $50,000,000 more will do any good."

Mr. Murphy of the First National Bank treated the matter jocularly. To coin the seigniorage, in his opinion, would do ne'ther harm nor good. What was w. nted, he d'clarel, was "a general repeal of all the existing silver laws, and then the adoption of a law fixing silver as a legal tender up to $500. If that were done," he declared, "all our muddles would be straightened out."

of the Queen of England. (Boston Herald:) Beyond any doubt Lake Trinidad is the most valuable lake in the world. It is an absolutely inex-haustible mine of wealth and in these days of asphalt the revenue from the lake shows so startling and rapid an annual increase that it can be a question of only a few years when the present lesses (from Queen Victoria. who owns Williams, Ariz.

lessees (from Queen Victoria. who owns the bulk of the lake,) will rank among the world's millionaires. Columbus discovered Trinidad on his third voyage, in the year of 1498, and as every school boy knows, who studies his Westno reason to n Hemisphere, the island lies off the ern Hemisphere, the island the bundred Wenezuelan coast, about six hundred miles north of the equator. There is no reason to doubt that what is now an island belonging to Her, Majesty of England was centuries ago part and parcei of the South American continent. The action of the sea has created narrow breaks in what was once the neck of a peninsula, and these are indeed so narrow that getting safely into the gulf must always prove a difficult undertaking for skippers unfamiliar with the lay of the rocks and varying depths of the chan-

The famous lake lies about a mile from the beach, and is reached by a road through a typical forest. Mon-keys, parrots and snakes of the deadli-est kind are here in abundance. The roadbed is asphalt unadulterated. A ndden break in the forest discloses the lake. The surface is dotted here and there with little clumps of follage, which form shelters from the sun's terrific heat for naked coolse pickaninnies rific heat for naked coolse pickaninnies whose mothers, equally minus of clothing, are washing the household linen in the pools that abound on the lake. Fine, sinewy negroes, wearing only a a waistcloth, lack but a spear to become formidable savage warriors. The lake's surfice during the rainy season is at times completely submerged, when the work of digging is, of course, more complicated; but in the dry season it looks for all the world like a vast base-ball diamond covered with elephant hide. This seems the one and only simile which covers the case. In some places the asphalt is firm and hard, in others the foot sinks to the instep, and, in the center of the lake the pitch bubbles, sulphurous fumes arise and a threatening, sizzling hiss betokens the existence of subterranean fires. Many of the natives believe that here is the capital of his Satanic Majesty's is the capital of his Satanic Majesty's dominions.

When the pitch is brought alongside the receiving vessel it forms a compact, spongy 'mass that resists everything but a pick. Baskets holding a quarter of a ton are passed up and down over the vessel's side, filled by a lightermen and emptied into the hold, the asphalt then appearing, in irregular blocks then appearing in irregular blocks about the size of an adult watermelon. It presents fissures and holes like those in a sponge. Once in a vessel the asphalt again forms a compact mass and becomes a by no means popular cargo with his capitals when they are not necessary, and sparing with them when needed, but he las a laudable object in view. He wints to show the "Unknown Friend" that he has an "occupation," and will "Marrey" her if he is given a chame to prove what he is. He writes:

The Belief That Business Troubles Unbal anced the Husband's Mind, Causing Him to Wander Off, Generally Credited—The Wife's Story.

Mrs. F. le Brant, a poor German woman with seven small children to care for and not a cent of money with which to buy groceries or other neceswhich to buy groceries or other neces-sities, occupies a small cottage at the corner of First and Alameda streets. Being herself quite ill and unable to do any work, she is at loss to know from where the from whence the next meal is coming to feed the hungry mouths of her household, for her husband, Henry le Brant, the sole support of the family has suddenly disappeared and is no-where to be found, having dropped out of sight as effectually as if the earth had opened and swallowed him up.

Le Brant is a cabinet-maker by trade, his shop being on East First street, where he has for several months worked in the endeavor to provide for his wife and children. Business of late, however, has been very dull in the cabinet-making line, and Le Brant late, however, has been very dull in the cabinet-making line, and Le Brant found that each day brought him harder luck, as he had contracted a number of debts for material needed in his trade and was unable to collect enough from each day's earnings to pay these off.

Last Tuesday morning he went to his shop as usual and remained there all day. Toward evening Mrs. le Brant sent one of the children up to see him, but he sent the child back, after giving her all of the small change he had in his pockets.

That night he did not return home at all, neither did he appear on the following day. On Thursday at 2:30 o'clock in the morning his wife heard a knock at the door, and upon opening it her husband staggered in. He was not under the influence of liquor, but looked pale and worn out. His shoes were torn and his feet blistered as if he had walked for many miles. When his astonished and anxious wife asked him where he had been and what was the trouble, he replied that he did not know, but that somehow he had seemed to fall asleep and the next thing he realized was that he was far out in the country. Recovering himself, he had at once looked about him and found that he was at Newhall. Then he turned about and once more tramped back to the city, arriving at the hour stated. tramped back to the city, arriving at the hour stated.

That was all he remembered about his singular trip, and he seems much improved in condition morning came as to be able to much improved in condition when morning came as to be able to again start out for the shop. But from that time until this he has not been home, and inquiry at the shop disclosed the fact that he had not reached there on Thursday morning.

Mrs. le Brant is almost beside herself with grief at the actions of her husband, whom she is now thoroughly convinced is in an unbalanced mental condition. When the reporter called at the house yesterday afternoon she was in a high state of nervous excitement, but told the story of her trouble in a composed manner.

"My husband I saw last on Thursday morning," she said. "He had been acting rather queerly for some weeks previous to that time, but I did not think that there was anything wrong. Tuesday evening he did not come home at night as usual, but in the afternoon he sent me what little money he had in his pocket by one of the children.

"I saw nothing of him the next day.

arternoon he sent me what little money he had in his pocket by one of the children.

"I saw nothing of him the next day, but at about 2 o'clock Thursday morning I heard a knock at the door and found my husband standing outside. He came in and sat down in a dazed kind of a, way, and insisted upon going to bed without eating anything. I begged him to tell me where he had been and what was the matter, when he told about how he had wandered off to Newhall without knowing where he was going.

off to Newhall without knowing where he was going.

"The next morning he got up and started off, saying he was going to the shop. A man had called to see him a short while before this, and Frank told him that he would be at the shop in a few moments. I thought that he was all right and did not watch him. Since then he has not returned home, and I don't know where he can be.

turned home, and I don't know where he can be.

"At the table on Thursday morning he would scarcely touch anything, and did not play with the baby as he usually does before starting out. After waiting all day for him to come home, I went up town myself, though scarcely able to walk, to look for him, but my search was all in vain.
"I can't tell why he should have become insane, unless it was through worry. Business has been very bad lately, and we were unable to pay our rent. Then the man shut off the water and we were compelled to carry what lately, and we were unable to pay our rent. Then the man shut off the water and we were compelled to carry what we needed from the neighbors' houses. The little girls have to do it now, and it is very hard on them.

"I don't know what I will do if my husband does not return, as I have not a cent of money. The landiord, too, threatens to make us move on account of our not paying up the rent.

"Poor Frank must have lost his senses. I am afraid he has wandered out of town and fallen down somewhere exhausted, or else he would come back. "Will the police look for him; can will the p?"

they find him?"
With this question, uttered in a tearful voice, the poor woman stopped.
The reporter assured her that the police would undoubtedly do all in their power to discover the whereabouts of power to discover the whereabouts of the missing man.

Where Le Brant has gone is a mystery, and altogether the unwilling belief of the wife that he has wandered off and walked until exhausted, seems to be the most reasonable.

If he does not soon return alive and well, or some charitably-minded persons come to the rescue, there will be starvation in the house at No. 202 North Alameda street.

Lemon-growing.

The following essay on the lemon was read before the last meeting of the Southern California Pomological Society by D. H. Burnham of Riverside:

To a person about to engage in lemon culture, the first question suggested would naturally be as to a suitable location. Too much importance cannot be attached to this, because favorable or unfavorable climatic conditions may make all the difference between success and fallure in the enterprise. The ideal locations are not easy to find, even in the favored elimate of Southern California, but diligent search will disclose them, scattered here and there at protected points and in limited areas. They may be known by the following conditions, viz., a. good fruit soil, freedom from damaging frosts, sufficient water for irrigation, and sufficient elevation and distance from the coast to secure exemption from fogs and smut-producing insects. As to the first, the soil To a person about to exemption from fogs and smut-producing insects. As to the first, the soil may vary considerably and yet produce good lemons, and it is presumed that if all other conditions are favorable there will usually be no difficulty with the soil. The temperature is most important. To insure the most perfect success, the maximum cold should not be greater than 32 deg.

Having selected the location, the choice of trees next requires attention. It is, perhaps, unnecessary to say that good, healthy, well-grown orange stock is the only suitable stock for either the lemon or the orange. No one, at this late date, will be likely to repeat the early unfortunate experiments with lemon, lime, China lemon and other stocks.

With regard to varieties, while admitting some of the claims put forward in favor of other varieties, I do ward in favor of other varieties, I do-not hesitate to express the opinion that the Lisbon possesses more good qualities than any other variety with which I am acquainted. I will say, however, in regard to the Villa Franca, for which much excellence is claimed, that my acquaintance with it is too limited to justify any expression of opinion in regard to its quality or adaptability to this locality.

Meteoric Shower in 1900. (St. Louis Globe-Democrat:) A dis-play of celestial fireworks will celebrate the close of the nineteenth century. The cluster of particles giving the Leonids, or November meteors, an orbit extending beyond that of Ura-nus and having its perihelion near the orbit of the earth, which it now inter-sects at that point reached by our planet about November 13 of each year. The period of the cluster is about thirty-three and one-fourth years. Unlike the less brilliant August stream, these meteoroids have not become scattered throughout their entire orbit, but only over about one-tenth of it, and they are consequently encountered by the earth only on about three successive years in each generation. The densest portion of the group gave the world in 1883 the most brilliant meteoric shower on record—a varitable rain of fre. On the return of the group, in 1867, as many as fifty meteors per minute were counted during the thickest of the shower. It was calculated that the meteors first became visible at an aver-age height of seventy-five miles and that if the average weight of each of the minute bodies was a single grain the entire mass of the stream might te rudely estimated to equal that of a globe of iron 400 feet in diamater. The stream of particles followed in the wake of Tempel's comet of 1866, being evidently derived from it. The next re-turn of the cluster is due in November, 1900, but meteoric showers may be expected also in 1899 and 1901.

Frozen Fruits.

(New York Mail and Express:) A good thing about the banana is that it is imported nearly all the year round, and is quite as cheap in winter as it is in summer. It is especially appreciated in winter in our climate, because of the scarcity of many other fruits. And this in winter in our climate, because of the scarcity of many other fruits. And this reminds me that my good friend, Eugene Blackford, the eminent pisciculturist, once undertook at my suggestion to put some watermelons away in his refrigerator in midsummer, and see how they would come out at Christmas. The day before Christmas I received a solidly frozen watermelon. It was a refreshing sight. I left it for hours in cold water to get out the frost, and then had to chop it open with a hatchet. It was frozen solidly. The beautiful red inside was still solid and sweet, but the moment the warm air melted it it became an insipid mushy mass. The next year Mr. Blackford sent me for my New Year's dinner some corn on the cob frozen. It came on the table looking as toothsome and smelling as appetizing as the hot corn of October, but it was ashes to the taste. I think this was ashes to the taste. I think this was the end of my friend's experiments with frozen fruits and vegetables.

An Organist's Wonderful Feat.

An Organist's Wonderful Feat.
(London Telegraph:) We have already mentioned that the office of master of the music in ordinary to the Queen, vacant by the resignation of Sir W. Cusins, had been offered to Sir Walter Parratt, and the appointment was officially gazetted last night. The new master's duties will include the direction of the private band, and the care of the royal library at Buckingham Palace, but various musicians will from time to time be specially appointed to conduct state concerts. Sir Walter time to time be specially appointed to conduct state concerts. Sir Walter Parratt, who is 52 years of age, and is a native of Huddersfield, has all his life been a church organist, and indeed, it is said that he first conducted a church service when he was only 7 years old. In 1882 he was transferred from Magdalen College, Oxford, to succeed the veteran Sir George Elvey as organist at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, and last year he was knighted. He is an admirable musician and a remarkable chess able musician and a remarkable chess player, and he is indeed credited with the feat of playing three games of chess blindfolded while simultaneously playing Bach's fugues on the organ.

The Land We Love.

Nature is fond of surprises and sharp contrasts, and nowhere under the blue and bending heavens do we find her so given to them as here in this semitropic land, this new Italy of the New World. Here we find her indulging in moods, save those of sullenness and tempestuous wrath. She has wide, gray expanses of desert wastes, where she seems forever brooding on the mystery of the past. Here she sits in solitude and silence, voiceless and dumb. Her only vesture is the white desert sands, garnished here and there with bunches of wild grass and weird cacti. No running streams laugh there under her blue skies, nor tinkle with the music of gladness. The birds shun her; the butterflies are half afraid of her sunshine; the false mirage gleams mockingly across the waste of sands the low-growing sage brush is a mimicry of forest; the bare hills are rockribbed and frowning. Nature is in a dream on the breast of the wide Majave as she has been for ages, and pulseless, only as now and then the winds toss her white sands and heap them up into miniature pyramids. But this is only one phase of Nature in this land of eternal summer. Leaving the wild desert solitude and coming toward the coast line we find a world as unlike the desert we have left as is the sandy beach to the green and blossoming garden. It is a unique corner of the world that he enter, a snowless, frostless region, unploughed by cyclones or tempests, blinded never by the glaring lightning, unvisited by the deadly sunstroke-a land of per petual bloom, of ever-ripening harvests the soil yielding abundantly, and the fruits of the tropics and temperate ones at home within its limits. summer without sultry heat that you and in the coast regions; a calm and perpetual sunshine that is but the synonym for comfort. As the sphynxlike desert is left behind the melody of singing birds breaks upon the ear The air is winged by thousands of butterflies that flutter gaily in the sunlight; bees hum murmurously amid the great orchards stretch like emerald seas as far as the eye can reach; vast vineyards cover the land for leagues the green fields of alfalfa are rich in their promise of abundant yield; the corn fields toss their silken banners in the shimmering light. At seasons the uncultivated lands are yellow with the mustard bloom, and the mustard lifts its branches higher than one's head. and the birds twitter among them and sing of the gracious summer. The wheat fields seem endless; the pine and the palm grow side by side, as do the apple and the orange. Here are groves trunks, and there the ashen gray of the olive with its ripening fruit. Here the green globes of the orange are turning golden, and there the strawberry blushes in its luscious richness The peanut is thriving in the rich warm soil in the valleys which lie at the base of the snow-clad peaks, which lift their hoary tops 11,000 feet into the cloudless heavens. The gay procession of flowers keeps up its increasing rch through the long year. Callas and magnolias lift up their white blooms, geraniums and roses and fra-

stretches of pasture land that but need rose. Across the wide intervales we catch the silver glimmer of the sea which all the summer touches the white sands of the beach with only rippling waves. The air is so dry that when occasionally the mercury climbs upward toward the nineties you scarce can say it is hot, and then as nigh nears cool breezes sweep over the land and fan it into comfort so that you may sleep in midsummer under your blanket, content with nature's beneficence and beguiled into the restfulness slumber. Rarely a cloud breaks the blue of summer skies, or a rough wind disturbs its equable calm. What wonder that the Californian is ever ready to sing the praises of the land he loves, and to believe that nowhere on the footstool is Nature so gracious and beneficent as here?

The Society of California Pioneers has fallen foul of that immortal liter-ary slob Hubert Howe Bancroft, and the rascal naked through because of the aspersions Gen. Grant in his recent, soThat Sinking-fund Levy.

The proposition to make this year's tax levy sufficiently large to cover the dereliction of previous boards of super-visors in not providing for the annual sinking fund, provided by law, borders on the ridiculous. There is nobody clamoring for this extraordinary action, unless it be an over-zealous official or so, and to burden the taxpayers of the county with the entire sum this year would be nothing short of an outrage Our tax levy is bound to be big enough, in all conscience; therefore let Board of Supervisors see to it that not to exceed 25 per cent. of the sum be drawn out of the depleted purses of the people this year, and they will have done all that can be demanded in rea

The labor unions made a great display at Chicago on the 4th inst. Their members were out by thousands for the annual parade and demonstration Nearly thirty thousand strong the narched through the principal streets of the business section of the city, and then went to the groves for their pic-nics and the sports of the day. From one end of this long procession to the other there was but one flag—the Stars and Stripes—side by side with their handsome trade banners. There were no black flags or red flags, emblems of violence, incendiarism, murder and rev olution. This shows that the alien An archist pests and the vicious riff-raff of that city were not in the ranks. The American laborer is, as a rule, intelligent and loyal to the institutions of the

The people along Buena Vista street above College, are up in arms about the way they are being treated by the water company. A stretch of weak water pipe has been put down there which keeps the street like a bog, and the gutters rank with green scum and weeds. ATTRACTION TONIGHT.—At the Los Angeles Theater tonight we are to have the first presentation of that much-talked-of play, "The Girl I Left Behind Me." The success attained by tims attraction wherever produced will, it is safe to say, be duplicated here, the advance sales indicating that this will be the banner engagement of the season thus far.

"The best American play" is what the New York Herald has named "The Girl I Left Behind Me." The same dis inction has been awarded the drama by all the newspapers of New York. The only difference being that they have a varied manner of saying it. This play was first produced at Charles Frohman's Empire Theater, New York, where, for 200 nights, it was received at every performance by enormous audiences, and their vociferous acclamations of delight, superinduced by its clean, wholesome atmosphere, its intensely human interest and stirring by its clean, wholesome atmosphere, its intensely human interest and stirring dramatic effect.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

A Heterodox Challenge.
PASADENA, Sept. 3.—(To the Editor f The Times.) During the recent sesion of the Presbyterian Alliance in sion of the Presbyterian Alliance in Pasadena Rev. D. R. Colmery of Los Angeles read an elaborate paper on "Future Punishment." which was strongly endorsed by Dr. S. H. Weller, the president of the alliance. The lecturer stated the doctrinal points of the creed respecting endless punishment in good, old orthodox fashion. Dr. Ell Fay of the Unitarian denomination was present and was a ion. Dr. Eli Fay of the Unitarian denomination was present and was so struck with the uncompromising attitude of the lecturer in the treatment of a theme which has been rather conspicuously slighted by evangelical preachers of late years, that he offered to give $20 for its publication in pamphlet form, with the presiding officer's endorsement, if he might have a portion of the edition for distribution.

When asked why he wished to circulate a Presbyterian sermon Dr. Fay frankly replied that, in his opinion, it would be an effective document for converting orthodox people to Unitarian belief.

Many people of both denominations.

Many people of both denominations, who heard of Dr. Fay's offer, have been anxious to see the lecture in print, the Presbyterians claiming that they are not afraid of the truth and do not wish it suppressed, and the Unitarians earnestly desiring a bold, clearcut statement of orthodox views on that much-ignored subject.

Denies the Whole Story. POMONA (Cal.,) Sept. 10.—(To the Editor of The Times.) I notice among your Pomona Items in today's paper that a Mr. French is accused of making your Pomona items in today's paper that a Mr. French is accused of making some absurd statements in regard to oranges and their value, and in consequence breaking up a projected sale by a Mr. Robinson at this point. As my name happens to be French, and I am agent for the Earl Fruit Company at this point, I presume I am supposed to be the villain in the play. In the first place, I beg leave to state that "to the best of my knowledge and belief" I never spoke to a Mr. Robinson at this place, nor do I know any one here of that nam! In the second place, I have only lived in California about five years, so could hardly have bought oranges in Southern California ten years, and in the third place, I have only been in the fruit-business about two years all told, and deny having made any assertion to the contrary. I also have ten acres of oranges myself, in which I have great faith, and although I expect to sell some next winter, it is not for want of faith in the orange industry. The tale looks somewhat ridiculous on the face of it, even were it correct. Why should "your humble servant" have power to entirely change the yiews of this Northentice. somewhat ridiculous on the face of it, even were it correct. Why should "your humble servant" have power to entirely change the views of this Northern capitalist, being strangers to each other. If I could imagine that land buyers and sellers would believe this nonsense, it would be of great benefit to me. I should immediately start a new business and call it "Making or Breaking Sales."

Hoping you will insert these few lines in your valuable paper, and beggins to assert once for all that, I deny making these statements (of which I am accused) to Mr. Robinson, believe me, very respectfully yours.

very respectfully yours,
ARTHUR L. P. FRENCH.

Vegetarianism in Japan. (Vegetarian:) Generally speaking a seat diet is not nearly so popular in he land of the far East as in England. There are still many people, especially in the interior parts of Japan, who have never tasted any animal food in their lives, and look upon it with horror, while a great many conservative women do not touch it even at the women do not touch it even at the present day. Moreover, animal food is expensive in Japan, and is, therefore, considered a luxnry which is quite out of the reach of the poor. During the whole of the year 1889 only 84,711 bulls and cows were killed in Japan to supply meat for 40,000,000 people, and it is worthy of note that there were 1,021,503 bulls and cows in the courtry during that year, while the number try during that year, while the number of the slaughtered probably included many animals which were not slain for supplying human food.

On such nights the Dairy building does a good business in the sale of milk lunches to the visitors who have been looking at the difficult progress of animal and human life as exhibited by mites and mammaths, to which last the living elephant is about the ball of the cannibals; computing the size of the missionary who would fill the boatlike feast tray; or, as one woman was actually found doing, test the suitability of the first electrocution chair by sitting in it.

The World's Fair offers amusement suitable to every possible taste. As no special evening entertainment begins until 8 o'clock, the ordinary visitor can have from 5 o'clock, when weary exhibitors generally cover their exhibits, to get their supper and see the several illuminated buildings before "the elephant walks around." This is the ground assigned to the representative Indians of the United States, who are on the grounds by government invitation. Here are the Penobscots of Maine, the Six Nations of Western New York, the Navajoes, and at present the United States Indian School of Genoa, Neb. Soloman O'Baile, a Senaca, is the grandson of Chief Cornplanter, who made a treaty with Gen. Washington when the Cornplanter reservation of Pennsylvania was made. Lewis Bennelt is "Deer Foot," who came to Chicago to run against horses and won, though not on present records. He is now 65 years old, and handsome enough to justify the Indian ideals of Cooper's novels, and the significance of his name. Chief Luther Jack is a Tuscarora, a skilled band leader and fine vocalist. Silver Heels, though a youth of 16, has the statue of a man. He is the clown of the company, and as Indians regard jest as incompatible with fact, he answers to the name of Ananias also. The Indian women do not receive significant names. Mine was the privilege of viewing the scene from the deck of the Progress, an old whaling ship which was towed in before the bridges over the lagoon were built. It has, among sailors, the reputation of a lucky ship. In 1844 it sailed around Cape Horn to the Sandwich Islands, and fixed her future reputation by bringilg back to her owners large profits. At the time of the civil war she was sold to the United States government to be sunk at the entrance of Charleston harbor, but being, too good for such fate, was resold to New Bedford, Mass., parties, for whom she earned in the far North in two seasons $200,000. In September of 1871, with thirty-eight other whaling ships, she lay in the Arctic Ocean. The experience of Capt. Dowden made him apprehensive from certain atmospheric indications of an ice jam, and he accordingly set sail. It took him forty-five days of great peril to find open sea only forty miles from the place where the fleet remained. On the sixth day he was joined by one of the boats having on board a part of the crew of one of the lost ships. These reported that the rest of the ships were shut in beyond hope of rescue. Twelve hundred persons were prisoners in the ice. Capt. Dowden called a meeting on his boat, and it was these decided to sacrifice the cargoes and go to the perilous and doubtful attempt to rescue those on the disabled ships. Success followed the attempt. The Progress alone brought off 260 survivors, among whom were women and children. At Honolulu the captains of the lost vessels presented to Capt Dowden a letter of commendation and a gold watch for his decision in favor of humanity. The Progress had ovations all the way down the St. Lawrence and through the great lakes. It is now a museum for Arctic curios, among which are a fourteen hundred-pound turtle, the skeleton of a sea serpent, and the fur suit worn by Greely during his expedition. Far to the north, on the lake front, is the Ceylon building, one of the truest exhibits of old race characteristics, appreciated by every one as curious and elaborate, but not well understood and elaborate, but not well understood by the crowds unlearned in Buddhist symbols. All the carving which so plentifully decorates interior and exterior is significant. The cobra-shrouded figures at the first stair are likenesses of the "janitors" who kept away evil spirits. The small ilons on pillars represent those on the guard stones of the temple of Annradhapura; other carving on the steps represent a waterieaf ornament, and the yakkas, a class of mild demons who avert evil. At the bottom of the steps a semi-circular slab called the moonstoon is carved in bas relief to represent the lotus flower, open in the center, with bands of sabottom of the steps a semi-circular slab called the moonstoon is carved in bas relief to represent the lotus flower, open in the center, with bands of sacred geese, lions, elephants, horses, and buils in the outer ring. On each side a fabulous beast, half lion, half crocodile, forms the balustrade. The building consists of an octagonal court with north and south wings, the whole length 145 feet, standing on a projecting basement. Two staircases lead into the octagonal hall and one into each of the wings. The carved steps leading to the entrances, two into the octagonal hall, and one into each of the wings, are copies of those belonging to the most famous ruins of temples of Annradhapura and Pollonnaruwa, the capitals of Ceylon from 543 B.C., to 1235 A.D. The doorway jambs are also patterned from those of old temples. Twenty-four pillars, some of satinwood, some of ebony, are carved to represent Twenty-four pillars, some of satinwood, some of ebony, are carved to represent the conventional drooping lotus, the upper tier imitate the plantain flower. The outer circle of pillars represent those of the audience hall at Kandy. A third type of temple architecture shown in the pillars in the wings of this building are copies of those of the kings granary at Kandy. The shoulders of the square which terminates the octagonal pillar is carved in the conventional cobra hood; the mouldings are stained with native color, the composition of which is a secret. The thirty-two panels of the ceilings are like ornamented, those of the wings remaining in natural color. Near these wings remaining in natural color. Near these are purely native pistures representing religious processions, copies of the frescoes of ruins, centuries old, and scenes from the life of Buddha. The floors are of satinwood and dark scenes from the life of Buddha. The floors are of satinwood and dark palu laid in diaper pattern. The tearoom is reached by a spiral staircase, the latter concealed by the ornamented screens which distinguish the center of the octagonal court. This dainty room has less carving, and is draped with oriental hansings that form recesses where teapoys of satin and suargosa wood are placed. Here your correspondent had the rare good fortune to drink a cup of tea that had but one fault—it spoiled all other teas. It is a "self tea," one which merchants do not blend with a weaker sort to mitigate the tannin, of which sort to mitigate the tannin, of which this has a comparatively small percentage.

Not excepting any, the native men and women are the handsomest of all the national representatives. Taily lender, erect, graceful in motion and facile in speech. Their dark faces sparkle with animation, their clear-cut profiles make them the Athenians of the Orient, Though their long, sliky hair is confined in a knot, and a round comb sits lightly on their head, and from the waist line to the feet they are wrapped in a straight close draping, they are in no sense grotesque, even to the rural visitor. After one glance we no longer confuse the people with pretenses of the blue lotus god, Vishnu nor Buddha. On the first floor these djeties are in carving or in efficy, together with a priest holding his begging bowl, a Kandyan chief, a trader, veddah-abordine-and his wife. Statistics show that the veddahs are dying out, their present number being about one thousand two hundred and twentynine.

The Unuemployed.

The saying that "the poor ye have llways with you" is as good today as when Christ uttered it, more than when Christ uttered it, more than eighteen hundred years ago, and in all probability will be just as true eighteen hundred years hence. Notwithstanding Edward Bellamy and his kind. By the poor, I mean the unemployed, although the unemployed are not always poor. I started out for a walk the other day in order to ascertain something about this matter.

Los Angeles is unlike ether cities of its size in this country, in that it has no particular poor quarter, but there no particular poor quarter, but there is a certain part of the town which will probably be known at no very distant day, as the manufacturing quarter, and at this time there are quite a number of small houses being built in that neighborhood. To this point I went first. I did not notice any signs of poverty such as one sees in the manufacturing districts of an Eastthe manufacturing districts of an Eastern city. The artisans and laboring men of this place, generally speaking, live in small houses and cottages, and most of these homes have an air of neatness, an attempt in most every instance being made to grow flowers and plants, and to keep the grass plat green. The women and children were welldressed, clean and neat. Undoubtedly there are a great many men out of work, but in conversation with out of work, but in conversation with a number of these men, they did not seem to be discouraged; on the con-trary, they talked as if they thought the present hard times was but temporary, and would soon give place to bet-ter. I was agreeably surprised to find the people in such a state of mind. Of course, I found some exceptions.

I talked to some exceptions.

I talked to some men who have decided anarchial views. There were few of such, however, and I do not believe their influence amounts to much. I found one man (a painter by trade) who said he had worked for one of the large railroad companies in this city for the past six years steadily. He has been cut down to two days' work a week; and as he cannot support his been cut down to two days' work a week; and, as he cannot support his family on the pay he gets for that, he has concluded to quit and start a chicken ranch a few miles from town. He has saved nearly $1000 out of his wages during the six years and figures that with good management he can do as well raising chickens as he can by working at his trade. It occurred to the writer that the saying "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good," comes in very apt here. A man who can save $1000 in six years out of his wages and support a family will make a success of the chicken business or most anything else for that matter. I heard of a number of men who have gone to vork on fruit ranches near by, and still others who have gone to the North to work in the hop fields, but there are a great many men idle, who seem to have no purpose as to the future. as to the future.

Any one accustomed to a large city would naturally think the pawn shops would do a big business; but the Los Angeles pawnbroker carries on his business somewhat differently from his Eastern brother. For one thing they do not lend money on wearing apparel and such things. A lady who is feeling the effects of hard times told me she tried to borrow $10 on a good organ which cost $125 in Kansas City, and which the family brought with them. The pawnbroker to whom she applied for a loan concluded as a great favor to let her have the money, and proceeded to make out a bill of costs for the transaction. I give it here just as he wrote it down on a slip of paper:

it down on a slip of paper: $2.95

$3.95 In addition to this there would be a charge for the release of the mortgage, but the amount was not specified. The figures $1 and 50 cents were in the bill figures $1 and 50 cents were in the bill just as it appears, but the lady could not, or did not, find out what the amounts were for. The broker stated, however, that the total amount would be something less than $5. This was for thirty days; if the loan was reproved at the evolution of that the provincion of that the source of the tense of the state of t newed at the expiration of that time it would cost $1 per month. The organ was to remain in her possession for the time being. The lady concluded she would try and raise the money in some other way.

This story sounds like fiction, but I took the trouble to investigate and found it to be true; besides which I got possession of the bill of particulars.

In the same neighborhood I interwiewed a German lady who is the mother of five young children. Her husband is out of employment. She said if they did not own their own home they would be in a bad fix. To make matters worse for them, her brother a short time ago arrived from Germany, and not being able to obtain work he is quartered on them. It cost him $150 to get here, and now his ambition is to earn enough money to get back to Germany. I talked to him, back to Germany. I taked to him, and, although he speaks English imperfectly, I managed to make out that he regrets leaving the fatherland. He said he could not obtain more than half as much for his labor in the old country as he would receive here, pro-viding he obtained work; but, on the other hand, he could find steady employment at home, and thought he could do fully as well there as here. At any rate, he would go back if he had the money to do so.

I visited Chinatown. The place has a deserted appearance. A number of Chinamen with bundles and gripsacks were apparently leaving town, but as I did not make any inquiries, I do not youch for the truth of this. The neighborhood certainly has a changed ap-pearance within these last three or four

I finally went to the Sixth Street Park to take a rest and observe what was going on there. After spending an hour in that pleasant spot and listening to the conversation carried on by difto the conversation carried on by different ones, I came away fully persuaded that the unemployed workmen know all about the silver question at a ratio of 16 to 1, the Geary law, Wall street, gold bugs and Baby Ruth.
Nearly every one also held an opinion as to the rich growing richer and the poor growing poorer.

It is, ex-actly as a surgical operation is justifiaactly as a surgical operation is justifiable when all other means have been tried and failed. It is the stern law of retribution whose working he cannot escape in after life. Willful cruelty, persistent disobedience may be punished thus, but it is a serious matter to run the risk of arousing the passions rather than of convincing the reason.

Populists may undertake this, but they will soon fall into the habit of 'looking backward" to the old days of individual independence and dependence, and conclude that they had rather take charge of the money they hav honestly earned, and dispense it as they see fit, rather than leave it to consti-tuted authority to do it for them.

"This question ought never to be hampered by partisan politics; it requires for proper adjustment the best thought of the best men of all politics. The great mass of our people, outside of those directly benefited by a change, look upon the act of 1873, demonetizing silver, as a colossal national crime, and are aaxious to remedy the wrong in any way it can be done, without committing another, and without detriment to the nation.

"That solution of the difficult problem which will restore to the country the free coinage of silver will be discovered, I have no doubt; neither do I question that we shall be most likely to reach the correct solution—one that will do justice to all classes and reflect credit on our common country, if we are able to keep it out of the bitter partisan politics of the nation."

THECHURCH'S NEED.

Botting Out Distinction of Rank or Condition.

A Practical Sermon by Rev. Ber Estes Howard.

Sorvices at the First Baptist, English Luti and Central Methodist Epis-pal Churches-Pacific Gospel Union.

Rev. Burt Estes Howard preached vesterday morning at the First Pres-pyterian Church, an intense and prac-tical sermon from this 'text: 'For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Matthew xvi, 26. The sub-stance of his discourse was as follows Men are of infinitely more value than nings. A human being is valuable be-ause of his manhood, not because of is circumstances. Yet on humanity, tripped of its rank and wealth, the world has ever set little value. The tue estimate of a man is as a man, s one having divine affiliations and lmost unlimited possibilities, and this what Jesus implied in the question

If the text.

Two thousand years ago one who aught truth to the people ascended the mountain and instructed by prophecy that gentleness should rule the earth, that right should supersede might, that the soul of man should take supremacy. But now might no longer determines the boundaries of nations or settles disputes; might is replaced by intellect, by pind. And already we can see that nind is being replaced by heart. There is in increasing estimate being put on s in increasing estimate being put on unan life; man is being more and Vithout entering into a discussion of the labor question, it may be said that the world has always had the labor question under one of three forms: Under slavery under a feudal system, or under the wage system. Under slavery man was simply like a tool. Mn were spoken of then as "slaves and other animals." They were thought of no more value than sheep, and, in sme cases, they were not even considered so valuable. Under the feudal spstem the peasant owned no property. I was merely a refinement of slavery, ills were packed to suffocation; men were hanged almost without provocator; life was taken easily. In slavery, and under feudalism, peace in the orld's ranke was governed by ciromstances or by chance. Under the rage system there begun to be realized a some measure the value of man as pan; but this system can never be so erfected, so refined in treatment that he true valuation of man will be recognized. Life, under its condition, mustiful be unequal, must be divided into ilasses. There must, in time, be somehing better, more harmonious; there must, in time, be co-operation in some form, but what it will be or how it will come it is hard to determine.

We are told that God made men of one blood, to dwell upon the face of the earth; and bearing this in mind we are gradually adjusting and balancing our scales, we are bginning to grow. Yet humanity still remains divided largely into groups. It is everywhere apparent that on bare humanity the world sets small appreciation, until by some lucky shift of fortune it becemes clothed with rank or possessed of wealth. What is now needed is that the world should become magnetized with enthusiasm. That it should look out on life with the magnanimity of christ, a magnanimity that sees through beggars' rags and beholds the spark divine.

In this connection a strong stand was skeen against misapplied charity. Such Vithout entering into a discussion of frough beggars' rags and beholds the spark divine.

In this connection a strong stand was taken against misapplied charity. Such charity the speaker characterized as vasted. A man is truly helped only when he is put in a position to help limself, and our organized charities are working too much upon conditions, without helping the actual man. In his the purpose of God is not served, for both condition and character are to be improved.

dren must encounter more or less temptation and wickedness, but when properly trained at home they grow stronger by resistance. So-called religious public schools will not change the contaminating influence. The report of the commissioners of crime and corrections for the city of New York for the years from 1871 to 1876, shows that three and a half times as many children from the parochial schools as from the public schools of that city, found their way to the prisons and reform schools.

The public school system is an indispensible safeguard of the republic. In this land where every citizen is a king, it is important that education should be universal. Our schools are not only the nurseries of patriotism, but they are the great unifiers of the different nationalities. Swedes, French, German and Spanish go to their separate churches, and flock together in social life, but at school the children all meet, study, sing and compete on a common level. They forget their nationality and become Americans. The Stars and Stripes should float above every schoolhouse, that the children of all classes and nationalities may learn to love the flag. Great problems must be solved in the future, great questions be answered — education and patriotism will help us through every ordeal.

Parents should, co-operate with the teacher in the intellectual development.

Parents should co-operate with the teacher in the intellectual development of their children. Seal your lips with the seven apocalyptic seals before you ever dare find fault with the teacher. Help her, strengthen her hands, visit her schoolroom and keen in symmethetic. ever dare find fault with the teacher. Help her, strengthen her hands, visit her schoolroom and keep in sympathetic touch with her in the training of your child. Do not assume to dictate, when their teachers have received a careful training for this specific business. A physician, lawyer, preacher or merchant is supposed to know his business, and we never assume to dictate. Why should we do so with the teacher? Appreciate her nervous strain and trying position, and ponder over Channing's words, "To educate a child perfectly requires profound thought, greater wisdom than to govern a State." Self-government is the object of education, and parents must learn it as well as pupils. Let us co-operate with the teacher in teaching our children to discriminate, to be self-reliant, independent and true. A little boy was asked, "Johnny, when your father and mother forsake you, who will take you up?" "The perlice I 'spect." If we do not do our part the police will.

There are two ideas of culture prevalent today: One is "ristian, the other pagan; one secured ducation for self, and the other to do good to others. Christ went about doing good. Let us imitate Him.

and the other to do good to others. Christ went about doing good. Let us imitate Him.

CENTRAL M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. F. M. Larkin, pastor of Central Methodist Episcopal Church, preached yesterday morning from Thessalonians ili, 13, "But ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing." These words, he said, were written to young converts. An impression had crept into the church of Thessalonica that Christ's appearing was near at hand, and they were beginning to neglect their every-day duties. Instead of attending to the temporal things of life as well as being "living epistles," they were laying aside these things and making preparations for the immediate coming of Christ, and taking part in the discussion of foolish doctrines. But Paul admonishes them not to be "weary of well doing."

The present generation is filled with weary people. Our cities are filled with weary toilers; not weary so much on account of their toil, but because of their inability to secure enough compensation to provide for their loved ones. Those foreigners, too, who have come to our land seeking employment are often weary and in need of our sympathy.

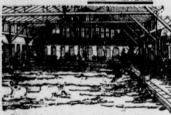

Then there is another class of laborers who do not receive the sympathy that they deserve. They are the rich men of the community. It is common to believe that the lives of the rich are lives of ease and comfort, and that they never know what it is to be weary. This is a great error, and the fact is that they are the persons who really toil the most, and are in need of that sympathy and comfort which comes from a knowledge of the religion of Jesus Christ. So, too, Christians sometimes grow weary of the duties which are laid upon them. There is a class who are never satisfied unless they can "mount upon wings like eagles," and they are constantly seeking some new excitement or religious fervor, forgetting that it is often a more worthy thing to be able "to walk" eagles," and they are constantly seeking some new excitement or religious fervor, forgetting that it is often a more worthy thing to be able "to walk and not faint" than "to run and not be weary," if the walk is the everyday, earnest, Christian duty borne patiently and prayerfully. But in all these classes there are those who are weary, not bodily, nor mentally, but spiritually; weary of a life of sin, and the Lord Jesus Christ says to them, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

PACIFIC GOSPEL UNION.

Over one hundred persons in all,

Over one hundred persons in all nen, women and children, took break

Over one hundred persons in all, men, women and children, took breakfast at the Sunday morning free breakfast yesterday morning at the Gospel Union. Mr. Hall conducted the meeting, using the miracle of the great catch of fishes as recorded in Luke xxi. The wagon workers held their meeting on the corner of First and Los Angeles streets, with a large crowd in attendance.

In the evening Rev. Osgood of Maine preached at the hall of the union to a large and attentive crowd on the subject of "Consecration," using First Chronicles xxix, 5, "Who then is willing to consecrate his services this day unto the Lord." Christian consecration consists of three—things. The service of God should be like the service of a wife, instigated by love. The Christian should be so in harmony with God that they find it a great joy and privilege to serve God. If our hearts are right with God there is no drudgery in serving Him. God says: "Son, daughter give Me thy heart." Second, doing His will. Whatever God has for us to do, and so evidencing the the perfecting of our love of God. Third, suffering for Jesus. The time may come when it will be necessary to suffer for Christ, and the consecrated Christian must be ready to do this. Consecrated service is willing service. Unwilling service is not consecrated service. The time for consecration is now. "Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?"

The music consisted of a solo by Mr. Hare, with violin obligato by Charles Valentine.

Rev. R. W. Clelland of Azusa will preach at the mission tonight.

Angeles Electric Railway Company Will Control

The Local Lines This Winter-Two Banne Days at Rubio Canyon-Personal Notes and a Batch of

It is altogether probable—and this on the authority of the owner of one of the local lines—that the Consolidated Electric Railway Company of Los Angeles will assume active control of the geles will assume active control of the several Pasadena street car lines this winter, although they will probably not be operated by electricity before next spring. The fact does not seem to be generally known that this Los Angeles company entered into a contract early last summer to purchase what is known as the Fair Oaks line, the Colorado street line and the North Pasadenado street line and the North Pasadenados the contract server line and the North Pasadenados the colorado street line and the North Pasadenados the colorados street line and the colorados street line and the North Pasadenados the colorados street line and the colorados street line and the North Pasadenados the colorados street line and the colorados street l street line and the North Pasa dena line of street cars, the bargain

A. J. Painter, superintendent and principal owner of the North Pasadena line, holds to this view, and says he has good reasons for doing so. It may be stated on the best of authority that as soon as the electric road gets its bridge completed across the river at Los Angeles it will immediately extend its line through East Los Angeles, and the work will not stop short of Pasadena. The carrying out of this enterprise will occupy the greater part of the winter. Meanwhile the local lines will continue to expected that the electric line will be expected that the electric line will be extended thus far and in full working order.

The City Council will probably act on the proposed franchises for the electric road at the meeting this (Monday) afternoon, which action will have an important bearing on the future conduct of the Los Angeles company.

on Sunday the trains were literally crowded, a number of extra cars being put in service.

Many people decided upon Rubio Canyon as the most attractive spot in this vicinity to spend Admission day. As a result, the first morning train for the mountains carried an unusually large number of parsengers. By afternoon the canyon and pavilion were filled with a lively throng of visitors, all bent on having a good time, and it goes without saying that they had it. Dancing to the strains of inspiring music, furnished by Lowinski's orchestra, constituted a popular form of amusement, and in the evening the spacious baliroom at the Hotel Rubio presented a scene of unwonted brilliancy. Numerous members of the Columbia Hill Tennis/Club graced the occasion with their presence, and many well-known society people of Pasadena and Los Angeles joined with them in tripping the light fantastic toe. At 9 o'clock, there was a brilliant pyrotechnic display on the summit of Mt. Vesuvius, and shortly after the steep hillisdes bordering the canyon were illuminated with superb effect. Then Prof. James delivered one of his entertaining and instructive lectures, his remarks being illustrated by a hundred or more stereopticon views. The subject was "Southern California," and was treated in a masterly manner. Nearly all of the views were new ones, and proved a revelation in the matter of unfolding the urrivaled charms and attractions of this section of country, even to the "oldest inhabitant."

of unfolding the urrivaled charms and attractions of this section of country, even to the "oldest inhabitant."

On Sunday the 9 o'clock Terminal train out of Los Angeles passed through Pasadena with three cars crowded to their utmost capacity. It was the same thing over again on the train that followed an hour and a half later, and each of the three afternoon trains had all on board that they could carry. No less than 500 visitors spent Sunday in the canyon and on Echo Mountain, making it a red-letter day in the road's history. Lowinski's orchestra rendered a sacred concert in the afternoon, and in the evening Prof. James delivered the second of his series of astronomical lectures, which was heartly enjoyed by all who heard it. Prof. Lowe states that several new cars, each capable fof carrying 100 passengers, will soon be running between Altadena Junction and Rubio Canyon. The electric power will be increased also, so as to avoid any delay at Altadena Junction.

The register at Hotel Rubio contained seven pages of arrivals on Sunday.

The dining-rooms at Hotel Rubio and the Swiss chalet on Echo Mountain were kept in full blast all day Sunday, catering to the demands of the hundreds of visitors, whose appetites were whetted to a keen edge by the bracing mentaln air.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Mrs. S. H. Fassett of Riverside, an old lady of about 60, and a young man from San Bernardino by the name of from San Bernardino by the name of Frank Metcalf, barely escaped from the burning building with their lives. Mrs. Fassett had not heard the alarm, and the young man had just sprung from his bed when they were found by a representative of The Times. The young man escaped with no clothing except his shigt and pantaloons, leaving all his valuables behind; and the hold lady was assisted to the open air by the correspondent. In jumping two steps from the lower porch to the ground the old lady fell and severely bruised her hip, which may yet prove a serious accident.

The family of the proprietor also had a narrow escape, several of the children being almost driven from their beds by the approaching flames. The oldest daughter had not time to secure her clothes, and barely escaped in her nightrobe.

OTHER BUILDINGS Near the hotel were other buildings, many cottages, which, fortunately, were saved by the prompt and heroic were saved by the prompt and heroic work of the men, women and children, who formed themselves into a bucket brigade. One lady stood at a cistern and pumped water, while the men carried the water in buckets and dashed it on the advancing flames. Several times the flames reached the cottages, but by keeping water constantly dashed over them they were all saved. The cottages of L. J. Colby, Dr. J. P. Boyd and J. Yock, all of Santa Ana, were charred to some extent, but not

Boyd and J. Yock, all of Santa Ana, were charred to some extent, but not otherwise injured.

By a fortunate change in the wind just after the blaze was first discovered, the fire was kept from a large quantity of baled hay that had been stacked up at the rear of the hotel, and therefore it became possible to confine it to the burning building.

A small stock of groceries and the postoffice went up in smoke, together with all of the belongings of the guests of the house. The cause of the fire is unknown. It is believed to have originated in the postoffice, in some unaccountable way.

That the people of Orange county are in earnest in their fight against the claims of Messrs. Wall, Bishop and Jones, better known as the starlight fumigating patent, is evidenced by the following call for a public meeting in this city Saturday, September 16, 1893:

"A convention of orange-growers opposing the payment of all claims under the Wall, Bishop & Jones starlight fumigation patent, is hereby celled at Spurgeon's Hall in Santa Ana, at 1 o'clock p.m. on Saturday, September 16,

'clock p.m. on Saturday, September 16 1893, for the purpose of perfecting or-ganization and making full preparation for asserting and maintaining our rights to fumigate with hydro-cyanicrights to lumigate with hydro-cyanicacid gas whenever and wherever we please, without contributing one penny to the oppressors backed by letters patent, resting upon claims the most absurd and unjust.

"Let every orange-grower ready for fight come out whether or not he has already signed the 'Roll of Union' for the defense. Suit has been commenced in the United States Circuit Court against one of our members for $700, and we must stand by him. Now is the time to rally and show our strength and our colors.

The following from Saturday's San Francisco's Chronicle will be interesting reading to lovers of the speed ring in Southern California, as well as to the people generally of Orange county. "Tom Keating did well on the Montana and Oregon circuits. He took five trotters and pacers along, and there was not a 'deadhead' in the stable. All won a big slice of the money hung up. Keating also informed the writer that Our Dick just now is as good as he ever was, but that he does not expect him to beat Diablo." If don't think there is a horse standing on four legs that can beat the four-year-old, was the remark made by the driver of Our Dick.

"The Santa Ana Association will be strictly in the swim this year. Diablo and Silkwood will meet there for the first time in October.

"Silkwood has a tremendous following in Orange and Los Angeles counties, but the admirers of Diablo will cover all the money in the two southern counties. Silkwood and Diablo are undoubtedly the fastest stallions that ever met in a race. Both are regarded as world-beaters. Reports reach here that old man Willitts gave Silkwood two half-mile workouts last week.

"The first one was made in 1:00 flat, and the second in 1:00½."

cessor to wind up the bank's business. Mr. Bartlett is a banker of experience and ability, and will no doubt prove himself equal to the emergency which has arisen.

In a circular from Mr. James to the depositors, he says that he is gratined to state that he is thoroughly convinced that every dollar-of-the bank's indebtedness will be paid. He says he has not the slightest hesitancy in making that emphatic declaration, because the resources are largely in excess of the liabilities, and in addition that he has conveyed to the bank in trust for the benefit of the bank's creditors all the real estate owned by him, including his homestead. He further states that the plan adopted for the winding up of the affairs of the institution insures that it will be done wisely, carefully and at very slight expense.

A meeting of the members of the proposed Orange-growers' Association will be held in the City Hall this afternoon at 4 o'clock, to elect a board of directors and complete the organization of the association. A full meeting of the orange-growers of this vicinity is desired at this meeting, as upon the selection of prominent and able men to serve as directors depends the success of the organization. The committee has met with good success in obtaining signatures' of growers to the incorporation papers, not a single grower so far having refused to join.

INVITATIONS.

CALIFORNIA

Where the Line is to Be Drawn in Sendi

Them.

(Boston Transcript:) A curious question of propriety often comes up among women which neither conventionality nor sentiment has ever wholly settled to everybody's satisfaction. That is, the line to be drawn in the sending of formal invitations to reach who have formal invitations to people who have recently gone into mourning. Opinion and argument go two different ways. From one pint of view it is judged that to send cards to gay functions shows a lack of sympathy with the sorrow of one's friend, and is as well a direct intrusion upon it. On the other hand, to ignore the names in black on one's list is, of course, to leave open the doubt that, because temporarily withdrawn from gayety, they have been forgotten. Moreover, it must be admitted that in many cases mourning is largely a mat ter of form. This is neither regretable nor, as it may seem, on the face, heart less. Respect for the dead is a desira ble thing even when a deeper feeling i impossible. And, admitting the case of impossible. And, admitting the case of those who feel most deeply, there really seems no lack of delicacy in including them in one's thought with an invitation, which must stand, if interpreted in the kindest sense, as only a remembrance. The revolution of mourning is something that no doubt will come to pass in due time. There will be less unmeaning crew worn, but until this nmeaning crepe worn, but until this end is accomplished and the signs of woe are reserved entirely to those whose affliction is beyond all casual comfort or interests—to be held in the minds of friends even at the inaugura tion of their merry-making will seem to many not only proper but good. Speak-ing of etfquette in this particular line, a word is timely about the spirit in which weddings are often taken. As usual rule, people in mourning classify them with any society doing—balls, din-ners, teas—and decline to be present on the same theory of propriety. Of the wedding breakfast or the wedding reception this is, indeed, possible; but concerning the marriage ceremony it-self, whether held in a church or a house, reason appears somewhat at fault when it is treated on the same grounds with dancing a german. NEW YORK'S AQUARIUM.

It is to Cost $150,000 and Permanently Oc

Apropos of the suggestion that the Kansas City Fair Association expend $1000 or $2000 in the construction of an aquarium, it is an interesting fact that the last Legislature of the State of New York voted an appropriation of $150,000 for a permanent aquarium, such an institution being deemed a pub-lic educator. The New York aquarium is expected to equal, if not surpass, the aquariums of the Old World. It will be free to the public, and is being con-structed in the old fortresses standing on the Battery, which several score years ago were the chief of New York city's defensive works. The aquarium will have thirty-six tanks arranged around the wall, which is circular, and in the center six small pools surround-ing a large pool twenty-five feet in di-ameter. In this large central pool will be placed a fine specimen of a white whale, and in the six smaller pools por-poises, sword fish, sharks and other ma-rine monsters. The remaining tanks will contain members of nearly all of the remaining finny tribes.

The aquarium building has an interesting history. Having outlived its usefulness as a part of a fortification, it was remodeled as a place of amuse-ment and named Castle Garden, a name thent and named Castle Garden, a name historic in the record of musical progress in America. Its walls have echoed the melody of Jenny Lind, Malibran, Sontag, Grisi and a score of other famous singers. It was the Metropolitan Operahouse of its time. Fashion, however, soon began to desert, and the building finally descended to use as an immigrant landing station. Twice it was burned, and three years ago it was vacated by the Immigration Bureau, which removed the landing depot to Ellis Island. Since then, and until the aquarium was projected, it has been used as a drill hall by the naval reserve battalion.

THE RABBIT PEST.

Damage Done by the Little Animals in Australia.

(The Spectator:) No one who is at all familiar with the feelings of resentment, irritation and despair which find their way into colonial prints on this subject can doubt that the character of subject can doubt that the character of the rabbit needs whitewashing badly. It is said that any person convicted of bringing the white rabbit to any port of Cape Colony would be lynched as certainly as would a negro murderer of white in the Southern States

In New Zealand the sheep farmer drives from one log cabin to another on his "run" with a cartful of cats in cages, which are deposited at each and taught to earn a living by keeping down the rabbit plague. The demand for cats, fostered by the increase of the cats, fostered by the increase of the rabbits, even disturbs the domestic cir-cle when hearth-rug favorites of known home-keeping habits mysteriously dis-appear, and bereaved housewives, on comparing notes, find a suspicious cor-respondence between the rise in prices offered by the advertising farmers and the sudden loss of their household pets. In Australia the rabbit has learned new accomplishment. In California it has forgotten an old one. The Australian rabbit has developed long claws and climbs the scrub with ease, in order to eat the leaves when grass is scarce. In California it has forgotten how to burrow; and recently a rising en masse of the inhabitants of the rabbit-infested district succeeded in driving the creatures by thousands into an inclosure, where they were destroved without a chance to escape. But in all the colochance to escape. But in all the colonies—and even in most parts of Germany, where the people will not eat rabbits, declaring that the meat is "too sweet"—the rabbit is looked upon as a pest, and so unremunerative as food as not to pay the wages of men employed in its destruction. Value of the Drained Zuyder Zee. Value of the Drained Zuyder Zee.

(Garden and Forest:) In the year
1886 a society was organized in Hol-land to make plans for the draining of the Zuyder Zee. It now officially re-ports that three-fourths of the soil covered by these 900,000 acres of water is as fertile as surrounding districts, and proposes a scheme of drainage which will leave 800,000 acres in the center as a lake, while the rest will be redeemed at a rate which will annually render from 12,000 to 15,000 acres habitable. The cost of the entire work is estimated at $76,000,000. The largest enterprise of the same sort hith-erto carried out has been the draining of Haarlem lake, which, after thirty-nine months of labor, added 46,000 acres to the solid soil of Holland. When the Zuyder Zee was formed by an inundation, in the thirteenth century, some 80,000 lives are believed to have been lost, and this fact gives an idea of the profit which will result from its redemption.

How to Live if You Wish to Live Long. (Medical Journal:) Aside from the important and controlling influences of inheritance, of diet and of temperate habits, the points to be learned from few statistical data attainable are that longevity is promoted by aquiet, peace-ful life in a retired rural community, where there is freedom from the nervous strain and worrying and excessively la-borious toil. The businessman with increasing cares and responsibilities, the mill operative, toiling hard to keep to-gether the souls and bodies of himself and family, the politicians, the hard-working professional men are not the chief contributors to the centenarian ranks.

A PRACTICAL DIVORCE. A queer divorce is reported from Tombstone. It consists of an instrument for record, "an agreement to sep ment for record, "an agreement to separate," as follows: "Know all men by these presents that we, John N. Thede and Marcellus Thede, husband and wife, residing at Willcox, Territory of Arizona, have mutually agreed to separate and live apart for the remainder of our natural lives, for reasons of incompatability of temper and disposition causing disagreement and unhappiness to both parties." Then follows

COWECY ON BUFFALO BILL. The riders at Buffalo Bill's show, says an Arizona cowboy just returned, are not what would rank as first-class equestrians on the ranges of Arizona. They ride trained horses which jump a few times, always in the same manner, all of which is easy enough. They would fare very differently on some of the uncertain, devilish, bucking broncos of the Southwestern plains. The same vaquero says that the cowboys of Montana, where he was recently, are poor riders. He and his companion were in constant demand for breaking broncos as long as they would.

Identification of the Remains of Two Delta Bank Robbers.

DELTA, Sept. 10.—(By the Associated Press.) The two men who were killed last Thursday while attempting to escape, after robbing the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank and killing its cashier, were positively identified to cashier, were positively identified to-day as Tom and Fred McCarthy, father and son. The third man who partici-pated in the robbery, but escaped, is Billy McCarthy; also the son of Tom McCarthy. These men constituted the McCarthy gang of Oregon, and are wanted there for robbing stages and United States mails. There is a reward of $10,000 for them on this account

The dead men were exnumed and identified by Sheriff Condee of Baker City, Or., who attempted to arrest them in Oregon, but was prevented by the McCarthys getting the drop on him. Ex-Chief of Police Farley of Denver also knows the gang, and says Tom McCarthy is the man who robbed President D. H. Monat, of the First National Bank of that city, some four years ago, securing $21,000.

Budd Taylor of Moab, Utah, who claims to be a relative by marriage to the McCarthy family, also identified the men. Billy McCarthy, the escaped robber, is still at large, but the pursuit has not been given up.

TWO FATES.

A TRUE AND TRAGIC TALE OF INDIA.

Specially Contributed to The Times Some years ago, when visiting Darpling, one of the many pleasant hill sani ariums of India, to escape the intolerant heat and monsoon weather of the plains, I contracted an intimacy with a Col. Ffolliott, an old retired acmy officer and civil servant of the government of India, who had seen active service in been permitted to accompany Gen Lord Frederic Roberts in the famous march from Candahar to Cabul, and for which he wore conspicuously the bronze Victoria cross, the highest honor to which an English soldier wishes to as-

I was introduced to Col. Ffolliott one I was introduced to Col. Ffolliott one afternoon at the Gymkana grounds, and soon a brief acquaintance ripened into a warm and personal friendship, which lasted until his death. I was a constant visitor at his palatial yet secluded bundler on the Jalanhar road, and many galow on the Jalapahar road, and many were the strange and weird tales of duty and pleasure in the wilds and fastnesses of jungle, hill and plain which I heard him recite as we walked alone in the shaded grounds which surrounded his home, or sat beneath the ever-flowering vine which grew in rank luxuriance around the bungalow, trail-ing over its yerandas and roof, and filling the evening air with a delightful scent. I asked the colonel one evening as we sat on the veranda watching the sun, speiled of his rays, float in the midst of a heavy, stifling air, sink slowly to the horizon, if he had ever cut the vine down since the bungalow had been erected. Well do I remember the look he gave me as he said: "My friend, my idol planted that vine; she had an indigenous love for flowers. Aye! a passion for trailing plants. It was an adoration with ber to stand for hours and gaze at this vine as if she saw it grow, inch by inch, with loving eyes upon the expanding blossoms! How she absorbed her atten-tion in the contemplation of its beau-ties, and how she sighed at eventide when its flowers closed for the night. when its flowers closed for the night.

To me, in this, her passionate attachment for a flower which evinced a delicate perception for the beautiful, and a sympathy with nature, and which exalted her soul to a contemplation and love of that beauty which is invisible, transcendent and underived, and that plant, which she loved and tended, proved her death."

Last in contemplation for a few min-

proved her death."

I sat in contemplation for a few minutes as the colonel finished, and rising from the lounge where I was seated, I said: "Colonel, how did this plant prove your wife's death, and, if it did, now can you let it remain here?"

how can you let it remain here?"
"Ah, my boy," he resumed, "that is where I find balm for my unhealed wound; it is an everlasting memorial of my earthly bride, and a book-mark in the pages of my mind. It will live while I live, and it will be allowed to die when I rest by her side on yonder hill.

"The story of her death was the saddest part of all. If I had been here, it might have been easier for me to bear, but at that time I was marching to Cabul. I did not hear of my darling's death until I reached Candahar, and ther only the merest details, but I subsequently learned from the servants who had attended her, of the manner in which her soul took flight.

"It appears that in watering her vine, which she always attended to personally, a cobra had strayed beneath its sheltering leaves, and in stooping to raise some of the flowers, stooping to raise some of the flowers, which were trailing on the ground, it hit her in the hand. An unfinished letter to me was all that I received, but as I gaze upon this tangled mass of foliage, I read in the whisperings of its leaves, and the scent of its flowers, a message from her who waits for me beyond."

One morning, some months after the One morning, some months after the recital of this narrative, a peon, on entering Col. Ffolliott's rooth, found his masterlying in bed, a bloated and disfigured corpse. His windows were open, and his eyes were gazing toward the vine, which could be seen outside. A hasty autopsy confirmed the doctor's suspicion. Col. Ffolliott had died from the effects of a snake bite. The snake had entered his room, as was supposed,

His body was laid to rest beside that of his wife, and a granite cross surmounts their graves, which is covered with that "idel" of his love, one "part of the trailing vine which surrounded their bungalow," and on a marble slab set into the granite block which marks their grave, is engraved:

> "TOGETHER." Until the daybreak

And the shadows fice away."

BURIED ENOCH ARDEN ALIVE.

An Egyptian Judge Who Believed Witnesses Rather Than His Own Senses.

A Swiss captain, at the end of a sanguinary and prolonged battle, caused the dead and dying to be thrown alike into pits and buried together. Someone pointed out to him that many of the bodies still showed signs of animation. "My good sir," replied the Swiss, "if a man were to pay attention to the signs they show, there would mot be a dead body among them." A similar power of preventing the mind being turned aside by trifling considerations appears to have characterized a certain kazi in the city of Cairo, Mansur Bin Musla by name. His decisions, according to the London Standard, were usually rather extraordinary, but every now and then they were so remarkable as to attract attention from disinterested outsiders. On one occasion the inhabitants of Cairo were shocked to see a living man borne through the streets, tied fast to a bier, and hurried toward the cemetery to be buried alive. His lamentable shrieks were entirely disregarded by the bearers, who remorselessly carried out their duty to its bitter end. It was soon ascertained that the Kazi Mansur was responsible for this atrocity, and, although orientals are not easily shocked where the administration of justice, so-called, is concerned, yet in this case it was felt that some inquiries should be made. Accordingly the kazi was interviewed, and he was asked why it was that he had caused a living man to be buried alive. Like Mr. Gilbert's young lady in "The Mikado." it was doubtless pointed out to him that burial alive is too "stuffy" a death to be agreeable. They found the kazi quite ready to satisfy their doubt. "You, wish," he said, "to know why this mar has been buried alive. Well, his burial has been ordered by me in due form because six years ago his wife was married to another man according to the decree of the law, awo witnesses of a very respectable character having certified to his death at Bagdad. The man, however, came before the court this morning, ple

The Warm Salt Bath.

Warm salt baths, taken at a temperature of 90 to 95 degrees, are eminently suited for those with whom the open sea bath does not agree, says the Lancet. Many people believe—and it is an idea that is hard to kill—that a warm bath at this temperature is "relaxing," but as a restorative after bodily fatigue, especially in hot weather, or as a means to relieve muscular pain and tension, it is difficult to find a better substitute. We go further, and hold that such a bath is better than open-air bathing for the nervous and debilitated, and especially in cases of irritability arising from mental worry, sleeplessness, intemperance and late hours. And the efficacy of such a bath in lumbago, gout and rheumatism, paralysis, sciatica and neuralgia is time-honored and is capable of everyday demonstration. The Warm Salt Bath.

Deservedly Popular.

Morris Poultry Cure Co. DEAR SIRS:—I am glad to testify to the merits of your deservedly popular Poultry Cure. One box of the remedy, given according to your printed directions, saved the lives of a dozen turkeys (six weeks old) when they were very near unto death with "sore head." They are now in prime condition for Thanksgiving.

Very truly,

Morris Poultry Cure Co. DEAR Sirs:—Allow me to congratulate you on your wonderful remedy. My poultry all got better at once.. I have not one sick chicken out of the firty I had when I sent to you for it: they all are cured. I wish you would send me appound can and oblige. Yours respectfully,

The immoral Houses on Los Angeles Street Should Be Removed.
S. W. Luitwieler, who is one of the business men on Los Angeles street who recently signed a petition asking that the immoral houses on that thoroughfare be not permitted to continue there, has stated to a reporter that the reason for asking this is that the undesirable places are a serious detriment reason for asking this is that the undesirable places are a serious detriment to business houses in the locality. The sowners of the pieces of property where the nuisances are located, are able to rent cribs for that purpose for a figure as high or higher than that which they could realize from the property if substantial business blocks were erected thereon. The fact that one piece of property on the street has on it some of the cheap one-story structures used for the detestable purpose, causes a depreciation in the value of other nearby pieces of property containing good buildings.

EVERYTHING QUIET

Sunday With the Chinese Residents.

What Wong Chee Says About the Situation.

He Denies That the Gardeners Will Stop Work,

But Says the Laundrymen Will Probably Shut Down from Fear of Arrest-Denies That It is a Boycott.

All was quiet down in the Chinese quarter yesterday, but beyond the air of seclusion which has prevaded the habitations of the Celectials for the past week nothing unusual was noticeable, the different stores being open and conducting business as usual. While it is true that a great many Chinamen have left town, nothing like a general exodus is as yet apparent, and those who remain seem to be indifferent as to whether they are to come under the ban of the sixth section of the Geary law or not.

In the County Jail seventeen natives of the Flowery Kingdom are now confined, awaiting trial and inevitable deportation, and before another day more warrants will be issued as have been already served. been already served.

On Saturday many rumors were set affeat regarding the alleged closing up of the laundries and the abandonment of work by the Chinese gardeners. Moreover, it was said that this state of affairs had been brought on by the order of the Six Companies declaring

Morcover, it was said that this state of affairs had been brought on by the order of the Six Companies declaring a boycott in retaliation for the enforcement of the law directing a crysade against unregistered Chinese, but this report lacked verification, and was strongly denied by the leading Chinamen here.

The reporter started out to find Wong Chee yesterday afternoon to learn what foundation the rumors had in fact. The complacent representative of the Six Companies was finally found seated comfortably at a round table in the rear part of a store on Los Angeles street, playing dominoes with a number of his countrymen. When he saw the reporter making his way toward him he looked up and called out with a smile, "Well, what's new?" When told that that was just the question the newsgatherer was about to put to him, he smiled again, and said quickly, "Nothing new at all." He then went on with his game, but between plays talked readily enough about the situation.

"Do I think the laundries will close? Well, maybe they will. The boys are all 'fraid of being arrested, I guess," he remarked as he alternately handled dexterously his little red-dotted blocks of wood and glanced at the questioner. "Are the men going to stop work because of an order of the Six Companies?" was next asked.

Wong Chee first replied "I don't know," in rather an uncertain manner. "Well, if the companies had made the order you would have known it, would you not?" persisted the reporter.

"Oh, yes, I surely would."

would you not. persiste the reporter.

"Oh, yes, I surely would."

"Do you think that the vegetable men are going to give up business?"

"No; maybe they are taking a little rest, but they will not quit work. The laundrymen—" here Chee stopped and looked doubtful for a second, and then concluded his remark by reiterating his former statement that he guessed the "boys" were scared and would try to avoid running any risk of being arrested. Then he resumed his game, with the promise to furnish the public with anything new that might develop in the matter. in the matter

The other silk-robed Celestials, who had been standing around listening to the conversation, nodded in approval also, for Wong Chee is an autocrat in Chinatown, and his word is law, to his faction, at least.

Six-team League to Be Organized in the The San Francisco Examiner of Sat-

The San Francisco Examiner of Saturday Says:

The Haight-street baseball ground has been leased by the Southern Pacific Company to J. B. Gilbert, of the firm of Scott & Gilbert, and baseball will be re-established. Next Tuesday a meeting will be held in this city, at which Mr. Gilbert and others who are interested in the venture will formulate plans for organizing a six-club league, the cities represented, as now proposed, to be San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, San Jose, Petaluma and Santa Rosa. The two latter towns have first-class amateur teams that would make a good showing in the league, and a great deal of interest is manifested. It is believed that if represented in the league they would give better support than Sacramento and San Jose.

Several of the players in the recent

Several of the players in the recent league have gone East, among them Hank Spies, the catcher on whom Uncle Henry relied. But there are yet Uncle Henry relied. But there are yet professional players enough in the State to fill out the six teams, and none will be imported until the home talent is all employed. For the purpose of seeing what the famous old-time players can do, a couple of games will be played at the Haight-street grounds at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon and 2 o'clock Sunday, between the present San Francisco team and a picked nine of the veterans. McGreevey and "Chick" Speer will form the San Francisco battery, and the picked nine will have the following remarkable aggregation of players:

CITY COUNCIL.

Matters to Come Up at the Session to Be Held Today.

The message from the Mayor last week, recommending among other things that twenty additional policemen be employed, and that four additional sanitary inspectors should be appointed, was referred to the commit-tee of the whole, as have been of late a number of other similar communi-cations from that official. It will be in order today for the Council to act cations from that official. It will be in order today for the Council to act on these matters.

The question of the disqualification of Mr. Ashman, of the school board, having been called to public attention, it will now, according to the city charter, rest with the Council to take action in the matter. While it is claimed by some that the grounds of the argument that Mr. Ashman entered into a contract with the city by merely selling goods to it, are technical, yet it has also been argued that it is an evident violation of the intent of the charter for a city officer to buy or sell from the city. It is stated in connection with this that when M. T. Collins was police commissioner Mayor Hazard objected to having Mr. Collins keep the patrol wagon horses in his stable for the city on the ground that Mr. Collins was a city officer and had no right to do so. Mr. Collins, rather than lose the work, resigned his position. It is also stated that Mayor Hazard declined on the same ground to have work for the city done at the tool works in which he was interested. On several occasions work was done for the fire department at the shops without Hr. Hazard's knowledge, and when he learned of it he refused to allow a requisition or demand to be presented for the same. case where such other country of which such Chinese person shall claim to be a citizen or subject shall-demand any tax as the condition of the removal of such person to that country, he or she shall be removed to China.

Unless such person shall istablish, by affirmative proof, to the satisfaction of such justice, judge or commissioner, his lawful right to remain in the United States.

Sec. 4. That any swin Chinese person shall istablish, by affirmative proof, to the satisfaction of such justice, judge or commissioner, his lawful right to remain in the United States.

Sec. 4. That any shall be to remain in the United States shall be imprisoned at hard labor for a period of not exceeding one year and thereafter removed from the United States, as hereinbefore provided.

on a charge of using the mails for an unlawful purpose.

Some time ago, it is claimed, De Long received one of the alluring epistles telling all about the "green goods" business, the writer offering to send on a supply of the stuff upon the receipt of a small deposit. Here was a chance for the credulous farmer to gain wealth by far quicker means than his daily toll would allow, and he was not slow in replying, the address given being that of M. B. Dunn, No. 327 Washington street, Boston. Evidently the authorities were on the lookout for any mail that might be sent to the supposed Mr. Dunn, for they made complaint almost immediately against De Long for violation of the postal laws.

A warrant was issued by United States Commissioner Van Dyke last week for De Long's arrest, and he was brought in yesterday by a deputy marshal and locked up pending an examination.

Hon. Herman Silver addressed the congregation upon the significance to the Israelite of the New Year, the Jewlish Rosh Hashanah. It was a finely worded and poetical address, containing allusions to the past and hopes for the future, and closing in an exceedingly tender manner with a farewell to the old year and a welcome to the new. "Happy New Year, one and all, young and old, rich and poor, happy and unfortunate," he wished them.
